In 1944, he made the acquaintance of novelist Richard Wright, who read an early draft of Baldwin's novel-in-progress and helped him secure a $500 grant from the Eugene F. Saxon Memorial Trust. The relationship between the two writers later became strained when Baldwin publicly criticized the older author's novel Native Son (1940).

The Short Stories of James Baldwin

"Go Tell It on the Mountain" - one of the early autobiographical stories - has already become an American classic. Baldwin's homosexuality and his ambiguous feelings towards the white establishment makes this a painful coming-of-age novel.

Baldwin Early Novels And Stories James

His first novel, Go Tell It on the Mountain (1953), tells the story, rooted in Baldwin's own experience, of a preacher's son coming of age in 1930's Harlem. Ten years in the writing, its exploration of religious, sexual, and generational conflicts was described by Baldwin as "an attempt to exorcise something, to find out what happened to my father, what happened to all of us."
