So an 85-kg. rider on an 85-liter Freestyle-Wave board can now pretty much use that in up to the maximum sailable wind, probably 40 knots quite easily, whereas in the past they might have had to have a smaller board for high-wind days. Similarly, that 85 might be fine around the low end of the wind band, at say 17 knots.

The most controversial aspect of Gone With the Wind is the film's depiction of race relations. Though freed from the novel's positive portrayal of the Ku Klux Klan, Gone With the Wind's depiction of slavery remains decidedly simplistic.Adopting historian U. B. Phillip's "plantation school" view of the institution, the film shows slaves as well-treated, blindly cheerful "darkies ...

The real reason to see this movie, though, is because it makes a big yacht race seem so glorious, such grand adventure. Ballard is a former cinematographer with a knack for visualizing the outdoors. Seeing "Wind," I was reminded of the black stallion approaching the boy in the surf, or the amazing scene in "Never Cry Wolf" in which a man found himself surrounded by a vast sea of buffalo.
