Dark End Of The Street

The Dark End of The Street is a film that will remind those who grew up in the suburbs of a simpler time. Told through the lens of multiple characters and families in a small town, the film slowly but surely intertwines each narrative to each other. Never in a forced way, but in a subtle and realistic way.

The Dark End of the Street is a fine first feature, filled with good performances that probe the anxieties and suspicions in a small neighborhood.

The Dark End of the Street (2020) - Rotten Tomatoes

"The Dark End of the Street" is a 1967 soul song written by American songwriters Dan Penn and Chips Moman and first recorded by American singer James Carr. Shortly afterwards, fellow American soul singer Percy Sledge included his version of the song on his 1967 album The Percy Sledge Way but, as a single, it did not chart as high as the version by Carr.

Kevin Tran 's "The Dark End of the Street" is a warm, modest film all around—its ambitions, filmmaking, and especially pacing. It seeks to have the stillness of a night in some random suburb (in this case, in the state of New Jersey), but imagines how the neighbors would react if a mysterious pet killer were on the loose.
