Mystery Cults Of The Ancient

A pendant to the official cults of the Greeks and Romans, mystery cults served more personal, individualistic attitudes toward death and the afterlife. Most were based on sacred stories (hieroi logoi) that often involved the ritual reenactment of a death-rebirth myth of a particular divinity. In addition to the promise of a better afterlife , mystery cults fostered social bonds among the participants, called mystai.

Mysteries were always secret cults into which a person had to be “initiated” (taken in). The initiate was called mystês, the introducing person mystagôgos (leader of the mystês). The leaders of the cults included the hierophantês (“revealer of holy things”) and the dadouchos (“torchbearer”). The constitutive features of a mystery society were common meals, dances, and ceremonies, especially initiation rites.

The Eleusinian Mysteries were initiations held every year for the cult of Demeter and Persephone based at the Panhellenic Sanctuary of Eleusis in ancient Greece. They are the “most famous of the secret religious rites of ancient Greece”. Their basis was an old agrarian cult, and there is some evidence that they were derived from the religious practices of the Mycenaean period. The mysteries represented the myth of the abduction of Persephone from her mother Demeter by the king of the underworld H
