Published in 1976, Place and Placelessness is a substantive revision of Relph's 1973 University of Toronto doctoral dissertation in Geography. As he emphasizes at the start of the book, his research method is "a phenomenology of place" (Relph 1976, pp. 4-7). Phenomenology is the interpretive study of human experience.

Place and Placelessness (□□)

Place and Placelessness was a revised version of my thesis in Geography, The Phenomenon of Place, that I completed at the University of Toronto in 1973. In that I aimed to make sense of a word that was widely regarded as central to my discipline and about which almost nothing had been written about it.
