The purpose of the current meanderings is to discuss some of the possible approaches to assessment and report writing. The goal is to offer an improved sense of purpose and direction to the process of producing a useful psychological evaluation. This discussion will begin with a presentation of several "models" of psychological reports.

Report Writing Theory

If the question is interesting but no theory implies an answer to it, this dearth might suggest that a new theory needs to be constructed or that existing theories need to be modified in some way. These would make excellent points of discussion in the introduction or discussion of an American Psychological Association (APA) style research report or research presentation.
