Simplicity in construction? It might not be a buzzword, but we'd argue that simplicity is the lifeblood of the most powerful of innovations. When data, workflows, and technology connect, they're all the more powerful. Apple is a key example of this fact. The same information flows seamlessly between the company's iPhones, iPads, and MacBooks.

One way to think of it is like this: element "id=" is for CSS, while element "name=" is for PHP. If you are referring to your element ID in the POST array, it won't work. You must assign a name attribute to your element to reference it correctly in the POST array. These two attributes can be the same for simplicity, i.e.,
